Why You Should Choose to Become Board Certified in Practical Holistic Nutrition?

Upon graduation from a recognized school, CAHN-Pro members can choose to become board certified by preparing for and writing the board certification exam. The exam tests scope of practice, code of ethics, some general nutrition, and other aspects of professionalism. Passing this exam and becoming Board Certified in Practical Holistic Nutrition will serve as a calling card for members to show insurance companies, government, other practitioners, and employers that they understand professionalism.

Board certification is a normal process for all professions. This means we must also have a board-certification process if we want to open more doors and gain more recognition. CAHN-Pro was founded to provide this for all holistic nutrition professionals.

What Does Board Certified in Practical Holistic Nutrition Mean?

Through our research, we have determined a special niche available to our profession that no other holistic nutrition professional is able to occupy. Compliancy is the key component missing for all practitioners. No profession, other than ours, has the time to spend with clients, listening to their issues and adapting protocols and solutions to fit the client, which helps with better compliancy. Practical Holistic Nutrition represents our ability to coach clients with diet and lifestyles changes that make sense to them, so we may help them achieve a better outcome for their health. Our board certification process, along with the type of upgrading we are encouraging our members to achieve, stresses better counselling skills and greater nutrition and lifestyle knowledge to increase our member's ability to have more options for clients for better compliancy.

How Do You Become Board Certified?

- Join CAHN-Pro as a Standard Member.
- Achieve at least 6 months to 1 year of practical experience in the field or take some of CAHN-Pro's training programs to gain more experience with professional standards and improve your depth of knowledge.
- Contact the CAHN-Pro office to request a free study guide. Study for the exam.
- Write the exam and become Board Certified in Practical Holistic Nutrition (no extra charge for the exam, but you need to find a proctor).
